“It is not despair, for despair is only for those who see the end beyond all doubt. We do not.” —The Fellowship of the Ring

“If I find in myself a desire which no experience in this world can satisfy, the most probable explanation is that I was made for another world.” —The Weight of Glory

“I have no choice. I don’t know what you have seen, John Baptist, and I can’t understand half you say. But he looked at me. I must see and speak to him. I must follow and find him, or never know peace again.” —The Man Born to Be King

“But you cannot trust us to let you face trouble alone, and go o’er without a word. . . . We are horribly afraid—but we are coming with you; or following you like hounds.” —The Fellowship of the Ring, spoken by Gandalf

“Wrong will be right when Aslan comes in sight, At the sound of his roar, sorrows will be no more, When he bares his teeth, winter meets its death, And when he shakes his mane, we shall have spring again.” —The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe

“When He talks of their losing their selves, He only means abandoning the clamour of self-will; once they have done that, He really gives them back all their personality, and boasts (I am afraid, sincerely) that when they are wholly His they will be more themselves than ever.” —The Screwtape Letters

“I tell you he is the King of the wood and the son of the great Emperor-beyond-the-Sea.” —The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe

“When I am afraid, I take the air, and of course I am, and nothing can hurt me as long as I can get my breath.” —The Screwtape Letters

“Wrong will be right when Aslan comes in sight, At the sound of his roar, sorrows will be no more, When he bares his teeth, winter meets its death, And when he shakes his mane, we shall have spring again.” —The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe

“The man who truly and disinterestedly enjoys any one thing in the world, for its own sake, and without caring two-pence what other people say about it, is by that very fact forewarned against some of our subtlest modes of attack.” —The Screwtape Letters

“I have no choice. I don’t know what you have seen, John Baptist, and I can’t understand half you say. But he looked at me. I must see and speak to him. I must follow and find him, or never know peace again.” —The Man Born to Be King

“But you cannot trust us to let you face trouble alone, and go o’er without a word. . . . We are horribly afraid—but we are coming with you; or following you like hounds.” —The Fellowship of the Ring, spoken by Gandalf

“Wrong will be right when Aslan comes in sight, At the sound of his roar, sorrows will be no more, When he bares his teeth, winter meets its death, And when he shakes his mane, we shall have spring again.” —The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe

“I have no choice. I don’t know what you have seen, John Baptist, and I can’t understand half you say. But he looked at me. I must see and speak to him. I must follow and find him, or never know peace again.” —The Man Born to Be King

“The man who truly and disinterestedly enjoys any one thing in the world, for its own sake, and without caring two-pence what other people say about it, is by that very fact forewarned against some of our subtlest modes of attack.” —The Screwtape Letters

“I have no choice. I don’t know what you have seen, John Baptist, and I can’t understand half you say. But he looked at me. I must see and speak to him. I must follow and find him, or never know peace again.” —The Man Born to Be King